

The 1893 Society honors our alumni and friends who have made a planned gift commitment to Montana State University.

Montana State University was founded in 1893 as the state's only land grant institution—the Agricultural College of the State of Montana—with the vision to provide access to higher education for students of all backgrounds, recognizing the crucial role of higher education for the social and economic development of Montana, the nation and the world. Today, Montana State has established a tradition of excellence in education, research and community outreach which continues to be rooted in the vision put forth by its founders.

Building on this tradition, the 1893 Society represents hundreds of alumni and friends of Montana State University who have made a commitment to strengthen the university's mission and vision for the future.

Thank you for providing for the future of Montana State University with a deferred gift or other estate planning mechanism.

Your gift enables the university to strategically plan for the future by investing in students and high-quality programs with wide-reaching, long-lasting effects.

As a member of the 1893 Society, we want to ensure that we honor your intentions and the impact you wish to make with your gift to Montana State University. We also want the opportunity to recognize you and share your story. By learning about your planned gift, we hope others will be inspired to make the same investment.

Please let us know how you would like to be appreciated as an 1893 Society member. Members receive invitations to 1893 Society events, including our annual recognition event hosted by President Waded Cruzado each fall. In addition—and with your permission—your name will be listed in the 1893 Society donor honor roll.
